John Conroy, a widely respected print and broadcast journalist, is author of the acclaimed Unspeakable Acts, Ordinary People, a compelling examination of torture in Western societies. Some years earlier he wrote Belfast Diary, which the New Statesman deemed “the best book to date on Northern Ireland.” He recently finished his first play Our Kind of Town, an exploration of torture by the Chicago Police Department. It recently debuted in Chicago’s famed Steppenwolf Theater (NY Times story here).
